Bordeaux vintage 2018: The harvest was shorted by 30% but this year due to the mildew pressure. There were a lot of rains during the spring, the soil was humid for a long period and the weather was warm, perfect for the spread of the rot. Merlot plots were the most affected. After this difficult spring, the vintage took a 180° turn with a magnificent summer, no rain through July and August; the remaining grapes were in perfect conditions and had a good maturity. Despite the 30% harvest loss, 2018 remain a good Vintage in Bordeaux, thanks to the warm and dry summer.
